Agriculture in Delhi Sultanate vs Mughal Empire

Delhi Sultanate

Mughal Empire

Land Revenue System: Primarily the iqta system land was divided into Iqtas and given to officers (iqtdars).

Primarily the zabt or bandobast system (introduced by Raja Todar mal under akbar).

Measurement & Assessment: Based on rough estimates, later Allaudin Khilji introduced actual land measurement.

Very scientific, land was measured using a bamboo jharib and categorized by fertility.

Revenue Collections: Collected mostly in kind (crops), though some times in cash. Tax was usually $\frac{1}{3}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ of produce.

Strongly encouraged collection in cash. Tax was generally $\frac{1}{3}$ of the average yield of the past 10 years.
